A phone call!
- Shruthi aunty

"Damn the server!"

Kevin was exhausted. He looked around with his droopy eyes. He rolled up the window shutter next to him. He hung his car keys from a hook that dangled from the rafters. All the cubicles were empty and looked depressing. Everyone had left for the day. This is the thing about being a part of a small firm; you get to learn, people you interact with know you well, but for the world, you are no one. It was a colourless week, for he was aware of only eating, sleeping and "the script". It was Friday today, the last day of the never ending work-week and luckily it ran without errors. He raised a brow; he was proud. He knew his client would appraise him. All that was left was to deliver it to the client. But the damn server was down. This was a pretty common scenario here. Servers restart at 11p.m and things slow down at this hour. However, it would be back by few minutes and he could peacefully go home and enjoy the weekend.

He kicked the coffee maker in the pantry with some might as it failed to work at this hour and made hot green tea for himself. The door creaked. "Who could be here at 11 in the night?? May be it is the wind or a cat" he wondered. He went back to his cubicle and stood by the window thinking about all the promises he had made for this weekend. He had to take his mother to the dentist. That was first on the humongous list. Then he had promised to take Lily out. Such stubborn but a lovely daughter she was. He had to help his wife with her shopping. He grinned...

Editorial

Hola Amigos,
As editors, we are writing to an audience who we never get to see. We never know if children are actually reading or liking our content. During the readers meet, we were extremely happy to see all the little faces who send us mails and make us smile. So glad that the meet was arranged. Any input/review/criticism please do drop us an email. We are here for you!

Keep sharing more contributions. 😊

Love,

Ridley the Riddle Turtle

I'm the fruit that acts like a vegetable
I'm as small as a cherry or as big as a baseball
You can eat me with salad, pizza, or pasta
Squeeze me in burgers or have me as soup
I'm very high in Vitamin A and Vitamin C
Don't forget about all the potassium in me

What am I?

Bizarre News

What do you do when your body aches? You need some comfort, right? What do animals do?

An African spurred tortoise named Helmuth experienced some joint pain as he weighed about 100kgs. He is currently being treated and given physical therapy by the reptile experts. But the best part is, he is placed on a rolling board so he can move as easily he wants with minimal effort. Thanks to the two amazing strong employees in the zoo who are helping him by placing him on the roller boards whenever necessary.

Name the Bird

-Shivani Manivannan

Hints:

1. We are medium-sized raptors, with a dark plumage (feathers) a forked tail, and a dark patch behind the eye.
2. We are very common and are found in India, the Middle East, Europe, and parts of Africa and Australia.
3. We eat small animals, fish, birds, bats, carrion (dead animals), and sometimes even household refuse (garbage).
4. There is a rumour that we spread fires by picking up burning sticks and throwing them in dry grass. This is not true, we are attracted to fires because animals flee from them and we can catch them easily.

Weekly Challenge

Yay April is here!
Means fun time is on!

CHALLENGE

To do: I want you all to try doodling. Draw an image and divide it into parts. Now, fill those parts with tiny designs and share your art works with us.

To think about: How did the names of the week come about? Is it because of the celestial bodies and planets?

To play: Arm wrestling ☺ It's a two player game. You can have teams and can send one from each team to wrestle. May the mightiest one win ☺
